THE SOUTH-CAROLINA AND COUNTRY GAZETTE; JOURNAL.

Containing the freſheſt Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

TUESDAY, APRIL 5, 1768.

To the Printer of the Public Ledger.

YOUR readineſs to oblige the unfortunate, induces me to hope you will give this letter an immediate place in your paper. I am the moſt miſerable man in the world; but you ſhall hear my melancholy ſtory; and I am ſure that your humane readers will think of me with compaſſion, and be ſincerely afflicted that it is not in the power of their pity to yield me any redreſs.

You muſt know, Sir, that I am the ſon of a very venerable lady, who has long been reſpected by all the world on account of her virtues, and who poſſibly never offered an injury to any but her own children; with theſe, indeed, ſhe ſometimes took liberties not ſtrictly juſtifiable, and for fear of ſpoiling them by too great a degree of indulgence, occaſionally treated them with the ſharpeſt ſeverity.

A few years ago, Sir, a conſiderable eſtate fell to my mother, in a diſtant part of the world, on which ſhe wanted one of her children to reſide, and all the reſt being provided for, but your unfortunate Correſpondent, ſhe offered to load me with favours, if I went abroad and took care of this eſtate; aſſuring me that ſhe would always conſider my intereſt as inſeparably united with her own, and promiſing that compliance in this reſpect was the readieſt means of exciting me to a higher place than I already poſſeſſed in her affection. With a good deal of perſuaſion, ſhe at laſt prevailed upon me to go, and accordingly with a heavy heart, I tore myſelf from her arms, for I ſtill loved her with the tendereſt ſenſibility, and felt a temporary kind of death, in the very idea of our ſeparation.

For ſome time, Sir, after my going abroad ſhe paid a very religious regard to her word, and conſcious of the ſervices I was doing her, and the ſacrifice which I made, ſhe ſhewed every deſire of promoting my intereſt, which I could reaſonably expect. It was my hard fortune, however, Sir, to live among deſigning and turbulent neighbours, who envied my mother the poſſeſſion of her property, and were continually making encroachments on it, hoping that I ſhould be too indolent, to take notice of the injury which they offered her, or believing that ſhe had not courage enough to reſent it if I did. In both, however, they were diſappointed, and after many diſagreeable litigations with theſe troubleſome people, my mother was not only ſecured in the peaceable poſſeſſion of her own rights, but even obtained a decree for a conſiderable part of their lands to defray the expence, which ſhe had incurred during the proſecution of her cauſe, in the ſeveral courts.

But alas, Mr. Printer, though by my indefatigable intreſtry I have not only ſecured her poſſeſſions, but greatly extended them; and though from an unprofitable wilderneſs I have made her eſtate one of the moſt valuable places in the univerſe, nevertheleſs as I riſe in merit, I ſink in her eſteem; and ſhe thinks of me with the ſharpeſt ill nature in proportion, as I ought to grow upon her affection. Every year, the remittances which I ſend her are prodigious; but ſhe is offended to the laſt degree at my preſumption, becauſe I think of keeping ſome inconſiderable matter for the maintenance of myſelf; when the eaſineſs of her own temper expoſes her to the machinations of her artful enemies, ſhe hourly rails at me with an inceſſant exclamation; and when they have ſtripped her of a large ſum of money, ſhe is in the greateſt rage imaginable if I do not inſtantly repair her loſs. If her ſtewards at home think proper to waſte away her wealth in penſions to ſervants from whom ſhe never received the ſmalleſt benefit; if they allow even princely incomes to the ſtrumpets and her porters and footmen, or ſuffer thoſe who are juſtly indebted to her, like Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Charles, to go off without ever diſcharging their accounts, the whole weight of her indignation is ſhure to fall upon me: I am called an unnatural monſter, becauſe I do not prevent the inevitable conſequences of her folly; and looked upon as a rebel to her intereſt, if I do not entirely remove her difficulties, when the ſame I conſtantly ſend her have left me utterly unable to mitigate many difficulties I labour under myſelf. Of late, Sir, ſhe has even taken it into her head, that I am the greateſt enemy ſhe has in the world, and is apprehenſive of nothing ſo much as the proſperity of her own eſtate, for fear I ſhould receive the ſmalleſt benefit from the increaſe of her circumſtances. My ingratitude and obſtinacy are now the continual topics of her converſation, and ſhe makes even the proof which I gave her of my duty and affection, an argument to blacken my character. She tells every body, that though ſhe has provided for me nobly, I nevertheleſs refuſe to contribute to her wants, and even deny to repay the expence which ſhe has been put to on my account; never recollecting that when ſhe made this proviſion for me, it was with a view of promoting her own intereſt; and never conſidering that if ſhe laid out ſome money in defending her right to the eſtate, the revenues of this eſtate have been conſtantly received by herſelf.

The unjuſt aſperſions which ſhe has thrown upon my reputation, and the unaccountable doubts which ſhe entertains of my attachment, have for ſome time paſt given me the greateſt uneaſineſs; but though I have tried by every dutiful repreſentation to ſhew the cruelty of the one, and the impropriety of the other, my mother ſeems abſolutely bent upon my ruin, unleſs I throw myſelf entirely upon her mercy; ſhe will hear no plea in my favour; ſhe will allow me no property, unleſs I conſent to give up every farthing I have in the world; and refuſes to take any meaſure for my welfare, unleſs I put it in her power whenever ſhe thinks proper, to plunge me in abſolute deſtruction. I love my mother, Sir, with the greateſt degree of filial affection, and you cannot conceive the anguiſh of my mind at finding myſelf unhappily the object of her indignation; but what can I do, ſhe is ſurrounded by deſigning ſycophants, and cannot pay any regard to my happineſs, while ſhe is inſenſible of her own. If I give her my all, I give it in reality to the flatterers who undo her, and draw certain beggary on myſelf, to expoſe her more effectually to the ridicule of her enemies. This is an inſupportable reflection, Sir; I am half diſtracted; and ſcarcely know that I am, any thing I utter.

Your very humble Servant,
CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS.

From a late ENGLISH PAPER.

To the PRINTER.

SIR,

THE alarming ſituation this country is in, on many accounts, calls on every well-wiſher to it to exert all their abilities to prevent the many miſchiefs that threaten us.

If ever there was a time for the great men of the land to be united, to throw aſide all paſt diſtinctions and animoſities, it is now. It is of much more conſequence, in my opinion, to preſerve the balance of affection between this country and America than ever it was to preſerve the balance of power in Europe, about which ſo many millions have been thrown away. America is now almoſt the only market for our manufactures; and if they are cramped in their trade, and affronted about trifles, it will induce them to ſet up manufacturing for themſelves, and a very few years would enable them to do it without us; and how fatal a ſtroke that would be, is very evident. This is a matter of ſuch importance to the future well-being of this country, that I hope to ſee, before it is long, the leaders of the different parties lay aſide all other conſiderations, and convince the world there is yet ſome public virtue left, by uniting together in a grand impartial plan of politics, with regard to Great-Britain and America, as will be equally advantageous to both.

To the PRINTER.

IN this time of great diſtreſs and grievous complaining among tradeſmen, about dullneſs of trade, and uncommon ſcarcity of money, it would be extremely beneficient if the wealthy and moneyed men of all denominations, would call for their tradeſmen's bills, and pay thoſe ſums which to them are trifling and inconſiderable, but to the poor induſtrous tradeſman, the needy mechanic, and all men of narrow circumſtances, are of great conſequence; eſpecially conſidering, that in the courſe of trade and buſineſs, a little remains here, a little there, and many of theſe little's collected together, would amount to ſuch a ſum as would ſet the needy man in a free and eaſy ſituation, enable him to pay his way, and ſo the money would circulate from hand to hand until it ſoon reverted to the ſame benevolent hands that had kindly put it in motion. Theſe little payments coming ſpontaneouſly from the great, would do the poor man infinite ſervice; yet ſuch may be his condition, that he dare not aſk for one of theſe ſums through fear of offending his rich employer, and through him many others connected with him by freindſhip and intereſt, conſequently ruining his trade. Thus are many worthy men circumſtanced at this day, on every ſide threatened with impending ruin; preſſed hard by their creditors on the one ſide, afraid to demand their own on the other, and I fear, very frequently repulſed by ſome of theſe wealthy cuſtomers, where they are bardy enough to ſollicit payments with threats of feeling their keen reſentments for preſuming to dun them. Hard alternative! either to diſoblige his cuſtomers or to go to goal for them! Perhaps both; endeavouring to call in his money to pay his juſt debts, he fails in his enterprize, incurs the diſpleaſure of his Cuſtomers, and at laſt goes to goal to oblige them. Conſider this, ye great! Appropriate ſome ſmall ſhare of your money to pay your tradeſmen's bills, you will thereby rejoice their deſponding hearts, revive their drooping ſpirits, give them freſh life and vigour in their ſeveral occupations, and do a greater act of charity (if I may ſo term it) than if you was to ſubſcribe large ſums towards ſome pompous charitable inſtitution.

I have no doubt but many noble, generous ſpirits, will readily take this public hint in good part, and ſhew their approbation by a ready compliance, and prompting one another to call for their bills and pay them with cheerfulneſs.

Your's, PROBUS.

The PRUDE. An Epigram.

CHLOE, at church, with looks devout,
Was overheard to ſay,
My morning glaſs is almoſt out,
A huſband, Lord, I pray.
A drolliſh ſpark, that near her ſat,
Determin'd for a joke,
Reply'd with voice effeminate,
I am an angel ſpoke;
You ſhall no longer be a maid;
Thou haſt neglected long
Thanks, good ſpirit, Chloe ſaid,
And loudly cry'd Amen.

GRENADA, JANUARY 18.

BY the general liſt of the King's domain, in the year 1766, there appeared to be therein Martinico;

12,450	white people;
1814	free mulattoes and negroes;
70,553	ſlaves, whereof 43,407 paid taxes, and
443	run-aways;
286	ſugar eſtates;
116	water-mills;
184	cattle-mills;
11	wind-mills;
11,444	quarres of land planted with canes;
1515	plantations planted with coffee, cocoa, cotton, caſſada, &c.
3776	horſes;
22,376	horned cattle;
14,519	ſheep, goats, and hogs;
293	aſſes; and
4214	mules.

On comparing the above liſt with that of the year 1765, there appears a diminution of 15 ſugar, and 302 coffee eſtates; which difference is not to be wondered at, conſidering the havock made by the hurricane that happened the 13th of Auguſt.

BRIDGE-TOWN, (BARBADOS) FEBRUARY 22.

On Tueſday laſt arrived here, in his Majeſty's ſloop Beaver, his Excellency William Spry, Eſq; Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Iſland of Barbados, &c. &c. His arrival being notified by a ſignal given for that purpoſe, he was properly ſaluted by the different forts. The members of aſſembly who had been appointed to receive his Excellency, waited on him in the afternoon, to know his pleaſure relative to his landing, which was fixed for Thurſday forenoon. About eleven o'clock of which day his Excellency, accompanied by his lady, &c. landed, under a diſcharge of cannon from the different forts, and was received on the wharf by his honour the preſident, and the members of the council and aſſembly; who proceeded through Broad-ſtreet, which was lined with the horſe-guards and ſix companies of the royal regiment of foot, to St. Michael's Church, where an excellent diſcourſe was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Thomas Wharton, from the following words: "O that men would therefore praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and declare the wonders he doeth for the children of men." PSALM cvii. ver. 8. His Excellency, attended, then repaired to Pilgrim in order to be ſworn before his honour the preſident in council.

Extract of a Letter from Port-au-Prince, concerning a new Method of making Sea-Water freſh, by Monſ. Chervain.

"The Art of making Sea-Water freſh, which has been always looked upon as very difficult, is now reduced to a little Oil and a common Still. So important an Operation, as it is executed by ſuch ſimple Means, is ſo much the more to be eſteemed; and the Generoſity of the Inventor in making it public, without any other Reward than the Satisfaction of doing Service to Humanity, cannot be too much applauded. The Frankneſs with which the Author diſcloſed his Method, left no Room to doubt the Truth of his Aſſertion; but, being curious to ſee the Experiment made of ſo wonderful a Diſcovery, we deſired M. La Roche, King's Apothecary at Port-au-Prince, to perform that Operation, which he did to our entire Satisfaction. In Preſence of ſeveral Witneſſes, he took three Bottles and an Half of Water out of the Sea, which he put into the Still, with only two common Spoonfuls of Olive Oil; then having ſtirred it about and diſtilled it, he extracted from it three Bottles of freſh Water, of which I drank a large Glaſs full. It was neither brackiſh nor bitter, and only taſted a very little of the Oil, owing to its not having been paſſed through a Cloth."

SAVANNAH, (in Georgia) MARCH 2.

The ſchooner Fanny, Ferguſſon, maſter, from South-Carolina with rice, ſailed from Dominico for Martinico the the 29th of December laſt, but the French would not permit her to enter that port, on account of the Royal edict which prohibits all Engliſh veſſels from entering any of their ports in the Weſt-Indies after the 31ſt of December 1767.

The Dominica Newſpaper of the 23d of January laſt, contains the following paragraph: "We hear that the Right Hon. the Earl of Chatham is actually appointed Secretary of State for the Southern Department, to the great joy of the whole nation, who expect great matters from his known abilities and great love to his country."

MARCH 23. By a veſſel from Salem we have advice, that the Honourable Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms have ſince their arrival appointed about forty waiters in New-England.

On Monday laſt arrived at Cockſpur from Gambia, the ſnow [illegible], Captain Stephen Deane, with ſlaves.

BALL's ALMANACKS for the Year 1768, to be ſold by the Printer.

WILLIAMSBURG, (in Virginia) MARCH 3.

THIS Morning, at two o'Clock, the Hon. FRANCIS FAUQUIER, Esq; Lieutenant-Governor and Commander in Chief of this Dominion, submitted to the relentless Hand of Death, and was releived from those enormous Infirmities which imbittered the latter Part of his Existence. The many good Qualities which united in this Gentleman, render the Tribute of Reverence justly due to his Memory. As a faithful Representative of his Sovereign; he was vigilant in Government, moderate in Power, exemplary in Religion, and merciful where the Rigour of Justice could by any means be dispensed with.

In the Exercise of his less public Virtues; he was warm in his Attachments, punctual in his Engagements, munificent to Indigence, and in his domestick Connexions truly paternal. Though his End was accompanied with uncommon Anguish, yet no Sigh or Complaint issued from his Bosom, no Pain interrupted the Serenity of his Mind. His Life was a Pattern worthy of Imitation. Let his Successors therefore walk in his Paths: Let his Survivours take Heed to his Ways. The Task is not difficult, when they have before them so strongly impressed the Footsteps of this [illegible] the [illegible] of this place and neighbourhood, assisted in paying the last offices to the deceased, sincerely lamenting the loss of a ruler who had endeared himself to them. The Militia of this city also attended, and paid the honour due to his memory upon this melancholy occasion.

To the memory of the Honourable FRANCIS FAUQUIER, Esq; late Lieutenant-Governor of this colony; a man who in public life was equalled by few, and in his private character excelled by none; who in spite of a lingering illness, and the severest attacks of the most excruciating pains, submitted to the relentless hand of death with a fortitude and resignation known to but few in the evening hours of departing life; this little monument is addressed by one, whose bosom retains the highest sense of those virtues possessed by that worthy Gentleman in so eminent a degree, as to make him still live in the bleeding remembrance of a numerous acquaintance, and to raise a monument in his country's bosom which is out of the power of censure to deface.

If ever virtue lost a friend sincere,
If ever sorrow claim'd Virginia's tear,
If ever death a noble conquest made,
'Twas when FAUQUIER the debt of nature paid.

[Mr. PUNCH insisting upon the LIBERTY of the PRESS, we therefore give the following a Place in our Gazette.]

SUSPENDED, one Evening last Week, in an obscure Corner, behind the Scenes (after the Fatigue of an Evening's hard Labour) by the Wire through my Head, my Master with some of his Friends seated near me, on the other Side, asked what News, and immediately one of the Gentlemen presented him with a News-Paper, at the same Time shewing him a Paragraph, wrote by a very ingenious Performer of the *J*gg*ng* Art; my Master, with his accustomed good Nature, smiled at the envious, malicious Design of so learned a Philosopher, and threw down the Paper; now I being the principal Person concerned in the Puppet-Shew, as I am sole Manager and Director of the Wooden Tribe, who form that Entertainment, have resolved, in Behalf of myself and Wooden Family, to take up the Cudgels, and though only a Figure of Wood, not the least beholden to Mr. *M*rt*n*'s Lectures, or any other Exhibitor's, for my Oratory, and Performances, or the Mechanical Turning of a Wheel, shall endeavour, as much as a Wooden Head can, to vindicate my own and Family's Character: My Master, though only Proprietor of a Puppet-Shew, and neither a Man of Letters, or of a philosophical or astrological Genius, thinking it beneath him to endeavour to ingratiate himself into the Favour of the Publick, by any mean Insinuations, or by degrading in the least, any other's Performance; but it verifies an old Proverb, two of a Trade can never agree, and perhaps, Jealousy which of the two Performers were the greatest JUGGLERS, has occasioned this Misunderstanding: Were I a living Being, as I am not, would explain myself better, but unless enlivened by Prometheus's Fire, or the Force of EL*CTR*C*TY, must remain, as I now am, a Log of Wood.
